2. Board Meeting Attendance Report for 2016/17

Rolando Fernandez moved approval of the consent agenda, Maria Hurtado seconded the motion; the motion was approved unanimously.

C. ACTION/UPDATE: 2018 Biannual Conference

Samantha Tavares updated the board on the planning for the conference. The local committee is working on an update of the sponsor packet. The artwork associated with the conference will be reviewed the week of January 8th. They are planning to open registration in June. The budget is currently being developed. They are discussing pricing for registration, including early bird registration June through August and increase the price starting in September. The pricing will be all-inclusive. Extra tickets for the banquet will be available. Rolando Fernandez noted that they felt the registration fee in Austin was too expensive and suggested a special rate for Arizona participants and a daily rate. Veronica Briseño agreed they should consider a daily rate and, although it is hard to manage, in Austin it paid off. Rolando Fernandez said it is too early to approve the budget and requested the budget and sponsor packet be brought back on the February agenda. The board concurred with the “call for speakers” document. They stated that the call for speakers should include outreach to specific people to invite them as well as a general outreach to the LGHN, NFBPA and ICMA memberships.

D. Website Tracking

Karen Davis presented the website data showing how many hits the site is getting. The board asked to follow up with Gabe Rodriguez to get additional information on the number of hits for each of the major program pages.

E. Committee Reports/Updates

Karen Davis reported that the committees are regrouping starting with the January meetings. Most committees are moving to quarterly meetings with monthly subcommittee meetings. The subcommittees will report their progress at each of the quarterly meetings. She also reported that Tacoma is moving to establish a chapter and has invited Bob Harrison to meet with them in February. The final report was that the Joel Valdez bust is being prepared for shipment to the ICMA office.

F. Future Board Meeting Agenda Items

- 2018 Biannual Conference Budget & Sponsor Packet - February
- Protocols for Use of LGHN Logo - February
- Bylaws Update
- Website Tracking – quarterly
- Fundraising Status

H. Other

- Rolando Fernandez asked that information from the Bay Area seminars addressing executive search be shared with the board. Maria Hurtado explained that there were two seminars that involved executive search professionals. The first was focused on more senior managers looking to become an assistance city manager or city manager. The representatives provided their perspectives and advice on interviewing for positions. The session included a keynote from an elected official. The second session focused on entry-level managers and how to create career paths and prepare themselves to assume leadership positions.
- For the LGHN biannual conference, Rolando Fernandez asked about soliciting recently promoted Hispanics for a session about their first year in their management position to share their experiences. The focus would be: I knew I was ready because... and I was surprised because... It could be entitled “So now you want the top position...” Dave Mora suggested a related topic featuring elected officials. Perhaps Pat Martel would moderate.
- Suggested sessions for the NFBPA and LGHN conferences could follow up on the session at ICMA about what to do to prepare to serve on the ICMA board. The panel could include people who are serving and look at the larger context of getting more people active on committees; how to play a larger role in the profession including regional events, networking, and how this leads into leadership roles.
- Maria Hurtado asked how the tracks were developed. For the LGHN conference the board needs to be engaged and be thoughtful about the national picture. It is the role of LGHN to force conversations/dialogue about what is happening. The purpose of LGHN (and NFBPA/I-NAPA) is to fill the gap around issues related to minority communities. Leadership locally pays off in the long run by making changes. The board agreed to have a broader discussion about the conference sessions at the board retreat in March. Samantha Tavares agreed to change the deadline for the call for speakers from March 2 to February 28 so the information can be compiled for the board discussion.

Logo Formats and Area of Isolation

Logo Formats

The LGHN logo is available in two formats, vertical and horizontal. Select the format that best fits the display area of the application on which it is to appear. The components within these formats are in a fixed size and spatial relation to each other and should not be altered.

Area of Isolation

A minimum area of clear space, referred to as the "Area of Isolation," surrounds our logo to ensure its legibility and avoid sending confusing messages as to its appearance. The Area of Isolation is proportional to the size of the logo and its perimeter is determined by measuring from the edges of the logo components to the distances indicated as shown in the diagrams below.

Logo Colors

The colors shown here are referred to as our "logo colors." These colors should be matched as closely as practical regardless of reproduction method. In general terms: PANTONE* is used for offset printing and serves as the reference color from which other color reproduction methods are matched.

CMYK is used for offset printing as well, but serves as a more economical method when printing four or more colors. RGB is used for screen monitor applications such as websites, video, PowerPoint®, etc.

*PANTONE® is a registered trademark of Pantone, Inc. The colors throughout this document may not match PANTONE. Refer to the current PANTONE Color Formula Guide for accurate hue and density match.

Request for Information/Qualifications: University Model Practitioner Programs

Background

Practitioner programs bring local government professionals into the classroom as guest speakers and as teachers (e.g., team teaching, adjunct professors, full time professors). The International Hispanic Network (IHN), National Forum for Black Public Administrators (NFBPA), and ICMA would like to receive proposals from public administration graduate programs to assist in identifying model practitioner programs at universities and preparing a document/guide that can be used to encourage and formalize partnerships between academia and local government professionals. IHN, NFBPA and ICMA are interested in attracting a greater number of practitioners to work with university programs by making it easy to get involved and receive the necessary training to become and stay involved in teaching. Practitioners add a grassroots dimension to the theoretical materials taught in the classroom and, in turn, reinforce the importance of the class lessons. Providing role models and mentors in the classroom will, hopefully, encourage more students/people of color to choose local government careers.

Scope of Work

The work should look at practitioner models in multiple universities, and determine the strengths, challenges and effectiveness of the various models. These models may be either formal or informal. IHN, NFBPA and ICMA will assist with member resources by facilitating surveys and interviews with our members and with ICMA University Chapters. At minimum, the surveys and interviews should result in descriptions for different models of practitioner programs currently in place in graduate and undergraduate programs. All ICMA university chapters should be invited to participate in the survey and interviews. Surveys sent to practitioners should ask if they would be willing to participate in the interviews. From the perspective of the practitioners who are currently in speaker or teacher roles, what are the direct and indirect benefits of these programs? What are the challenges? What have they done to minimize or overcome these challenges? What are the concerns or issues of local government professionals that have not or are hesitant to become involved in practitioner programs? What would encourage them to become a practitioner at their local/regional college or university? Surveys sent to academics should identify what types of teaching practices are in place (e.g., team teaching, adjunct professors, full time professors). Is the practitioner structure formal or informal? Is coursework co-created by the Academics and the practitioner? If not, what model do they currently use? What do academics see as benefits and challenges of involving practitioners in the educational programs?

Proposals/Request for Information/Qualifications

Universities are requested to submit an outline and preliminary budget of their approach to conducting research and preparing the guide/document of best practices. Submittals should not exceed three pages including an estimated budget. A committee comprised of academics and practitioners will review the submittals. More detailed proposals will be requested from the submittals that best address the core requirements of the project. Key components are listed below. Proposers are encouraged to include students in the research and preparation of document to maximize their exposure to local government professionals, especially in the interview process and subsequent presentation of findings.

- Review of existing information from ASPA and NASPAA.
- Development of surveys, which will be distributed by ICMA, IHN, NFBPA and other local government affiliate organizations to their respective members.
- Development of interview questions/guidelines to expand and further clarify survey results. Interviewees will be identified through the survey and recommendations from ICMA, IHN, NFBPA and other affiliate organizations. University participants will be responsible for scheduling interviews with assistance as needed from ICMA, IHN and NFBPA.
- Proposers may add additional steps as deemed relevant to the research.
- Preparation of a draft document for review by ICMA, IHN and NFBPA.

- Schedule for completing the project.
- Estimated budget for completing the project (hours and costs).

Researchers will be invited to present their project to the ICMA Committee on Graduate Education and the participants will be recognized at the IHN Dinner at the 2018 ICMA conference. The 2018 ICMA Conference is September 23-26 in Baltimore, MD. The results will also be published in the ICMA PM Magazine.

International City/County Management Association
Response to RFQ: University Model Practitioner Program
Arizona State University School of Public Affairs
October 19, 2017

Introduction

Arizona State University's School of Public Affairs is proud to offer this overview of the assets, intellectual capacity, and interest in response to ICMA's Request for Information/Qualifications regarding University Model Practitioner Programs. The School is heavily invested in the integration of practitioners into classroom experiences for students as well as research activities in a number of areas. Furthermore, the School is a leading proponent of bridging the gap between the academia and the practitioner communities, particularly at the local level of government through the efforts of the Center for Urban Innovation. Dr. David Swindell, director of the Center, will serve as the Principle Investigator on this project.

Below, you will find an overview of the qualifications ASU brings to this project and our initial plan to achieve the goals ICMA has set out in the RFQ. The School would be happy to provide a more detailed proposal of how we can produce an excellent product for the partners and one that will be useful to universities in terms of providing concrete steps to integrate a greater practitioner presence into their existing degree programs.

Purpose & Philosophical Orientation

ASU's School of Public Administration is ranked #4 in city management by US News and World Report and #13 among all public administration programs in the country. We believe an important aspect of our success in increasing our rankings has been an aggressive overhaul of our Masters of Public Administration program that emphasizes practical application of evidence-based decision-making. This approach is now woven into our classrooms, faculty research, and community outreach. Along with the impact of our MPA program, we also saw the launch of a very successful undergraduate program focusing on public service as another factor driving greater visibility for our School as well as meeting an unmet need among young people for professional educational opportunities that meet and bolster their desires to engage in public service.

ASU is a very large university with over 72,000 in-person students, plus another 35,000 online. The College of Public Service and Community Solutions is home to the School of Public Affairs (where we focus the training of our local government management students). According to our charter, ASU is a comprehensive public research university, measured not by whom we exclude, but rather by whom we include and how they succeed; advancing research and discovery of public value; and assuming fundamental responsibility for the economic, social, cultural and overall health of the communities it serves. The commitment to these principles of ASU (and the School) is reflected in the diversity of our student body: most representative Research-1 institution of its home state's demographics, most veterans, most Native-Americans, most first-generation college students, and the list goes on.

The School of Public Affairs is committed to an academic experience for our students that stresses critical thinking skills while building marketable skills that will help them succeed in whichever public service path they pursue. Critical to this educational approach for us has been a reliance on many public sector leaders in the classroom and in our applied research efforts in which students are involved. The school's advisory council includes six city management officials, three county management officials, and representatives of four professional local government organizations all from around the state. Relative to the goals of this ICMA project, ASU shares this commitment. We want to improve our own abilities in this educational approach, and we want to share lessons we have learned from others and from our own experiments.

While not all of our experiments have been successful, our most successful one has emerged from our partnership with ICMA, the Arizona City Management Association (ACMA), and the Alliance for Innovation (which is housed here in School). These partnerships support our Marvin Andrews Fellowship Program in City Management which provides tuition, stipend, and travel support for four of our top MPA students each year that are interested in careers in city management. Other aspects of our approach is a robust ICMA student chapter, taking 10-15 students to the semi-annual ACMA meetings and League of Cities meetings, and arranging site tours for students of various public works facilities.

In addition to the student-focused activities, we also integrate practitioners into the classroom experience directly. We developed the “Professor of Practice” position and have brought various practitioners into these roles over the years. For instance, George Pettit (former city manager of Gilbert, AZ) works directly with SPA and the Center and is a critical linkage for us to the regional practitioner community. He also teaches for our MPA program. He is currently teaching our graduate-level Urban Services Infrastructure course and has brought into his classroom 12 local leaders from municipal, county, and tribal governments over a broad range of infrastructure areas. George is only one of our four professors of practice. Furthermore, we have several “Faculty Associates” that are currently working in city management positions but also enjoy teaching classes as well, currently including Scottsdale city manager Jim Thompson and Surprise assistant city manager (and one of our alums) Nicole Lance.

Initial Proposal

The ASU approach is but one model. We are constantly working with NASPAA and ASPA to learn and share new pathways to bridge the gap between academia and practitioners in this way. Furthermore, we have ongoing research projects tying practitioners with faculty as well. We believe our experience, resource capacity, and network of academics and practitioners puts us in an excellent position to development a “how to” manual with multiple models that others schools can adopt (based on their contexts). These models will facilitate greater participation of practitioners in their education missions in a way that attracts not only more students to public service generally, but a diverse array of students to local government management specifically.

- Review of existing information from ASPA and NASPAA. ASU’s MPA program is accredited by NASPAA and faculty are involved in various governance activities. For instance, Dr. David Swindell serves on the Local Government Education committee and is the former chair of the Marketing committee that conducted a study on the skills local managers are looking for when hiring new MPA graduates. We also are heavily involved with ASPA where Dr. Swindell is chairing the Donald Stone Award Committee and is a member of the Section on Intergovernmental Administration and Management. We will work with both of these organizations to review previous studies they have conducted related to attracting diverse students into public service and the role of practitioner integration towards those ends.
- Development of surveys, which will be distributed by ICMA, IHN, NFBPA and other local government affiliate organizations to their respective members. The ASU team has extensive survey design experience, particularly regarding local government officials. We have worked on survey design, implementation, and analysis on many projects with ICMA in the past, as well as the Alliance for Innovation (in addition to other survey projects with many other organizations). We will utilize ICMA, IHN, and NFBPA, as well as our relationships with other local government organizations (e.g., the NLC, GFOA, etc.) to solicit input from the practitioner community on the opportunities and barriers they face when considering participation with schools as guests, faculty associates, professors of practices, or other equivalent kinds of positions.
- Development of interview questions/guidelines to expand and further clarify survey results. Interviewees will be identified through the survey and recommendations from ICMA, IHN, NFBPA and other affiliate organizations. University participants will be responsible for scheduling interviews with assistance as needed from ICMA, IHN and NFBPA. While many of our projects have involved survey approaches, they almost always include additional in-depth interviews with representative subgroups to help add more detailed qualitative information that illustrates the broad findings from the surveys. For instance, this project is likely to identify challenges from the schools’ perspectives concerning quality control. Not all practitioners will likely be good in the classroom. A survey will capture such a finding relatively easily. But only follow-up interviews with principles will allow for a more nuanced understanding of the variations in institutional constraints that need to be addressed that can inhibit practitioner participation. Also, interviews will help “flesh out” the models our report will highlight in terms of how practitioners can receive the training in pedagogy they need for the more intensive forms of educational participation.

- Proposers may add additional steps as deemed relevant to the research. As mentioned previously, ASU is intimately tied to NASPAA and ASPA. In addition, the Center is building the Urban Innovation Research Network (UIRN) that already has 20 universities expressing interest in joining. While UIRN is focused on applied local government research, this project could easily utilize the members for assistance in collecting the interview and program-specific information about their own practices related to increasing diversity of graduates going into local government as well as how they integrate practitioners into their classroom experiences. So our proposal includes the additional aspect of collecting information from NASPAA programs, ASPA faculty, and UIRN members on this issue from the schools' perspectives as well the practitioners through ICMA, IHN and NFBPA, as we seek to develop multiple models of practitioner participation for universities facing different contexts.
- Preparation of a draft document for review by ICMA, IHN and NFBPA. The primary product we will seek to deliver as part of this project is an applied report that includes several elements:
  - Literature review of similar efforts and challenges (academic research as well as reports from NASPAA, ASPA, and the Chronicle of Higher Education)
  - Survey results from practitioner community
  - Interview results and case studies from practitioner community
  - Survey results from academic community
  - Interview results and case studies from academic community
  - Practitioner Model 1 for programs in smaller, more isolated locations
  - Practitioner Model 2 for programs in metropolitan areas but smaller faculty resources
  - Practitioner Model 3 for programs in metropolitan areas with greater resources
  - Appendices for methodology, full survey results, and catalog of example programs

The draft of the report components will be shared with members of ICMA, IHN, and NFBPA for comment and revision before final release. The final version may be one document or a smaller document with online supplemental materials (such as those materials listed in the appendices).

- Schedule for completing the project. Literature and report review will take place from February through April. The two surveys (practitioner and academic) will be developed in February and March for launch on April 2nd. The academic survey will be open through mid-May (one week after most schools will have finished their spring semesters). The practitioner survey will be open longer due to the common challenge of getting sufficient responses during the budget season. Data cleaning will be conducted on a rolling basis as data arrive. The expectation is that this will be an electronic survey using the Qualtrics survey platform (we have a license for this). Cleaned data will be provided to all three partner organizations. We will conduct the case studies and interviews beginning the second half of May through July. Concurrently, we will begin writing the literature/report review and the survey results sections of the report during this time. The beginning of August will be spent integrating the lessons from the cases and interviews into the final recommendations and drafting the initial report for review by the partners by August 20th. The partners will have three weeks to review, leaving us three weeks to integrate their comments into a final document that will be presented at the 2018 ICMA Conference in Baltimore.
- Estimated budget for completing the project (hours and costs). We are proposing an extensive project in response to ICMA's request. There are several aspects of our proposal that exceed the basic requirements, but we believe these are useful aspects to include for a superior product that yields different models for different kinds of programs. We will utilize students as Graduate Assistants as well as capstone MPA students to help keep the costs relatively modest. Labor is the most significant cost driving the budget, which we estimate to be approximately $9,500 plus indirects. If we apply our federal indirects rate of 56.5%, that leads to a total project cost of approximately $15,000. This would cover the costs of a graduate assistant for the spring and summer at 10 hours per week for six months plus 50 hours of faculty time over the life of the project. We can adjust this accordingly if other elements of the project we propose are ultimately not desired by the partners.

We hope you find our general approach appealing and we would be happy to provide a more detailed proposal if you like these ideas. We look forward to hearing from you.
